I have briefly read the response made by the authors to the reviewers' comments and I appreciate that they have made much effort to improve their manuscript and take into account the criticism and suggestions they received. I do need, however, to consider the response more carefully before making a recommendation and/or further suggestions to the authors. Unfortunately, I am leaving to the field tomorrow morning (5 am) and do not have the time to perform this important task in the serenity it requires. I will do that as soon as I come back from the field on Sunday the 2nd of November. I apologize for the delay this might cause.
